

FILLED HIM WITH BUCKSHOT.

Walter Wiley, the Grocer, Meets a Midnight Visitor With a Shotgun.

THE LATTER REFUSES TO HALT.

Whereupon He Suddenly Finds Himself Brought Down With a Badly Perforated Leg—The Wound
Not Fatal.

Last night, between 12 and 1 o'clock, Walter Wiley shot and seriously wounded a burglar at the corner of Thirty-sixth and Farnam streets.

Mr Wiley and his partner, Williams, keep a small grocery store on the south side of Farnam street at Thirty-sixth, and they have been troubled before by burglars. One week ago last night the store was broken open and filled by two men, who escaped before Mr. Wiley, who slept in the basement, apprehended their presence. He saw them cross the street after they had gone through the store, and fired a shot, them, only to be answered by a shot from the departing thieves. Mr. Wiley determined to place no more confidence in the revolver, but at once procured a double reled shotgun and loaded it heavily with buckshot.

Last night, at the hour named above, Mr. Wiley was awakened by some one moving about in the store room above him, and seizing his gun he cautiously crept out and around to the front door. As he did so he noticed that the side window was open. Seeing that the front door was still securely closed Mr. Wiley took his position at the back of the store and awaited further developments.

In a few moments the feet of a man came out through the window, and as the burglar

Mr. Wiley walked slowly up to his side and looked at him as he lay in the pelting rain, writhing in pain.

He gave his name first as John Watson, and later as John Hurd, and says he has worked at the New York chop house, and some weeks ago as a panwasher at the Casey hotel. He is of slight build, light complexion, and wears a light colored coat and slacks.

but, his wounds are not necessarily fatal, or even very dangerous, but may cause him a good deal of suffering. He says his people live in Chicago. The policeman said he has been a suspicious character about the city for several weeks.

pockets. A dozen cigars and about fifty pennies comprised the haul he made. In breaking the cash drawer loose he had cut his hand on a sharp nail and drops of blood were sprinkled all about the room.

It is believed that the wounded man had a partner in the job, for some one was heard to call to the group of men who gathered about the store from the woods north of Farnam street. The voice called out defiantly for the man who did the shooting to come down there and get a similar dose.

Mr. Wilcy, who did the shooting, was considerably excited over the event, but he and his neighbors felt that he had done the proper thing.
